

Do I need a financial advisor to start investing?

It's a good idea, because an experienced professional may help you make better financial decisions and feel more confident about your future.

Although you can search the internet and get answers to a financial question in seconds, it may not really help that much. Articles that turn up can have conflicting information. And it's often hard to distinguish the good ideas from the bad ones.

Because of this, trying to invest on your own can be confusing. It may even lead to doing nothing at all, which will make it nearly impossible to achieve your goals for retirement.

A financial advisor can help you understand investing and develop a financial plan especially for you.

With a formal plan, investors are

3x
more likely to feel prepared for retirement as they save more and are twice as likely to estimate their expected income and expenses*

A financial plan is a written document that's unique to you and includes a summary of your current financial position, your goals for retirement and a plan to reach them.

Other ways a financial advisor can help you include:

Let your financial advisor help you start investing and prepare you to achieve your goals for the future.
