

Look abroad to find potential opportunities

Certain countries outside the U.S. could experience economic growth, which may offer investors like you opportunities for higher returns.

Being the world's largest economy and most dynamic financial market, the United States led the way out of the previous recession and into the expansion phase of the business cycle. The U.S. has been a driving force for economic expansion across the globe. But it's worth noting that many major economies are also in the expansion phase.

Work with your advisor to identify international investments that may help you take advantage of return opportunities emerging overseas.
