Columbia VIT AQR Managed Futures Strategy Fund — Class 2

Investment Strategy from investment's prospectus

The investment seeks positive absolute returns. The fund pursues its investment objective by allocating assets among four major asset classes (commodities, currencies, fixed income and equities). The fund's universe of investments is subject to change under varying market conditions and as these instruments evolve over time. It may invest without limit in foreign instruments, including emerging market instruments. The fund may invest up to 25% of its total assets in the Subsidiary.

Past name: VP AQR Managed Futures Strategy 2.

Category Description: Managed Futures

These funds primarily trade liquid global futures, options, swaps, and foreign exchange contracts, both listed and over-the-counter. A majority of these funds follow trend-following, price-momentum strategies. Other strategies included in this category are systematic mean-reversion, discretionary global macro strategies, commodity index tracking, and other futures strategies. More than 60% of the fund's exposure is invested through derivative securities. These funds obtain exposure primarily through derivatives; the holdings are largely cash instruments.
